ECONOMIC STIMULUS

Group Holds Town Hall Meeting Over Economic Stimulus Plan

 February 2, 2009 10:53pm

As President Obama's economic stimulus plan makes its way through Congress, members of West Virginians United for Social and Economic Justice held a town hall meeting to talk about what the plan would do for the state.

"It is very important to see how that money is going to be spent," Executive Director of WV Center for Budget and Policy's Ted Boettner said.

If passed it could mean around $1.4 billion in federal funds for the state. Teresa Miller came to the meeting with her family and hopes the money will keep jobs here in the Mountain State.

"I'm hoping especially here in West Virginia that we can keep jobs that we currently have," Miller said.

Another concern for Miller, the cost of health care. State senator Dan Foster said under the plan the percentage of matching funds for Medicaid would go up significantly.

"Increased Medicaid funding will stimulate jobs in the healthcare area," he said.

Meanwhile Miller is hoping the plan will improve things sooner rather than later.
